FEDERAL COURT LITIGATION

DISTRICT OF COLORADO

Your I-485 Interview Is Over. Your Case Shouldn't Still Be Pending.

Post-interview Adjustment of Status Delay Litigation

For applicants whose Form I-485 has stalled after their interview at the USCIS Denver Field Office.

Helping applicants move forward when unreasonable USCIS delays stand in the way.

Many applicants who have completed their I-485 interview at the USCIS Denver Field Office are left waiting months for a decision — often without explanation, and without the ability to work or travel in the meantime. USCIS has a legal obligation to decide these applications within a reasonable time. Joseph & Hall P.C. is preparing a federal lawsuit to compel USCIS to act.

DO YOU QUALIFY?

- ✓ Attended your AOS interview at the USCIS Denver Field Office
- ✓ At least 2 months have passed since that interview with no decision
- ✓ No known ground of inadmissibility, and no waiver being sought
- ✓ If issued a post-interview RFE, you've already responded and 2+ months have passed

WHAT WE'RE SEEKING

A court order compelling USCIS to decide your I-485 by a deadline set by the judge. We are not asking the court to approve any application — only to force a decision, whatever that decision may be.

Brought under the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. § 706(1)), and may also invoke the Mandamus Act and Declaratory Judgment Act.
This is a group suit, not a class action.

$1,100

TOTAL FEE TO PARTICIPATE

- One flat fee covers you and any derivative applicants (spouse/children) on the same I-485
- Non-refundable once the case is filed
